

Jordan's Principle Scholarship

For First Nations Students Studying Children's Holistic Health or Wellbeing

Presented by The First Nations Child and Family Caring Society

ABOUT JORDAN'S PRINCIPLE

Jordan River Anderson of Norway House Cree Nation is the founder of Jordan's Principle. Jordan was born in Winnipeg on October 22, 1999 and spent over two years in hospital before he was ready to live in a family home. Unfortunately, the governments of Canada and Manitoba argued over the costs of Jordan's at home care because of Jordan's First Nations status so Jordan could not leave the hospital. Jordan waited for over two years while governments argued before he sadly passed away at age 5 in the hospital never having spent a day in a family home.

Jordan's Principle says that First Nations children should be able to access the government services they need when they need them without any additional red tape related to their First Nations status. It passed unanimously in the House of Commons on December 12, 2007 but the Canadian government failed to implement it. In 2016, the Canadian Human Rights Tribunal ordered Canada to cease its discriminatory approach to Jordan's Principle by applying it to all First Nations children on and off reserve and across all public services. Thousands of children have now received services due to Jordan's Principle.

SCHOLARSHIP ELIGIBILITY

This scholarship will be paid to the successful applicant by the First Nations Child and Family Caring Society. The scholarship is open to First Nations students studying children's holistic health or wellbeing at a Canadian post-secondary institution. Students must be enrolled full-time (as defined by their school) and must have at least two semesters of school left.

In addition, applications will require the following:

- Confirmation of First Nations identity.
- Confirmation of full-time registration at a Canadian post-secondary institution in a program relevant to children's holistic health or wellbeing. The student must be returning to study for at least two semesters.
- Demonstrated commitment to First Nations children's health and community service.
- Demonstrated knowledge of Jordan River Anderson and Jordan's Principle.
- Demonstrated academic commitment and achievement.
- Financial need will be considered.

This is a one-time award not renewable to past recipients.

APPLICATION PROCESS AND KEY DATES
