

Jordan's Principle Scholarship

For First Nations Students Studying Children's Health or Children With Disabilities

Presented by The First Nations Child and Family Caring Society of Canada in partnership with Norway House Cree Nation

ABOUT JORDAN'S PRINCIPLE

Jordan River Anderson of Norway House Cree Nation is the founder of Jordan's Principle. Jordan was born in Winnipeg on October 22, 1999 and spent over two years in hospital before he was ready to live in a family home. Unfortunately, the governments of Canada and Manitoba argued over the costs of Jordan's at home care because of Jordan's First Nations status so Jordan could not leave the hospital. Jordan waited for over two years while governments argued before he sadly passed away at age 5 in the hospital never having spent a day in a family home.

Jordan's Principle says that First Nations children should be able to access the government services they need when they need them without any additional red tape related to their First Nations status. It passed unanimously in the House of Commons on December 12, 2007 but the Canadian government failed to implement it. In 2016, the Canadian Human Rights Tribunal ordered Canada to cease its discriminatory approach to Jordan's Principle by applying it to all First Nations children on and off reserve and across all public services. Thousands of children have now received services due to Jordan's Principle.
